Did you know that almost 20% of America's students live in poverty?

The bad news is that poverty can make devastating, chronic changes in the human brain.

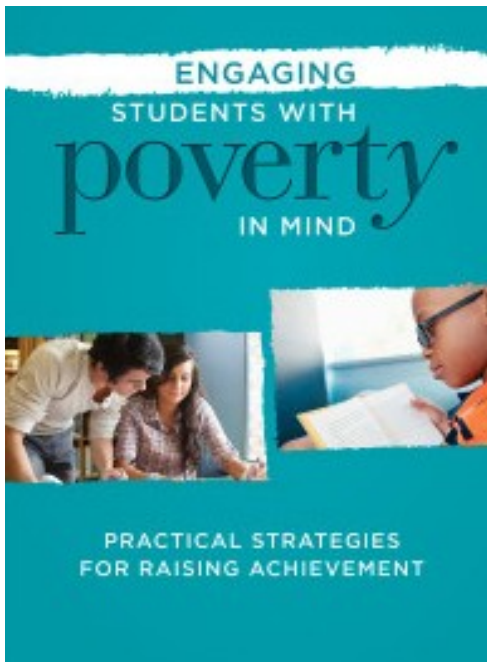

The good news is that there are powerful solutions that schools have successfully implemented that demonstrate students from poverty CAN achieve.

If you aren't satisfied with how your school is addressing this issue, you will want to attend.

Objectives for the day:

- Understand how the "impoverished" brain is physically and behaviorally different
- Discover surprising insights into and solutions to challenging student behavior
- Acquire strategies to help students become successful learners
- Learn student achievement methods to obtain proven, consistently positive results

Return to work armed with powerful knowledge and practical skills for reaching "unreachable" learners!
